LEAGUE OF NATIONS MOVES TO PREVENT 'BALKAN OUTBREAK'

Council Is Called Into Conference Monday To Investigate

HOSTILE FORCES FACE EACH OTHER

Bulgarian Town Now Is Occupied By Greek Soldiers

(Associated Press)

PARIS, Oct. 23—The machinery of the League of Nations was set in motion today in an effort to prevent another Balkan war. M. Briand, as the presiding officer, has summoned the league council to meet here next Monday and investigate the cause of the dispute which suddenly flared up between Greece and Bulgaria early this week.

The difficulties started on Monday in the frontier region of Demirhisar, but the mass of official and semi-official claims and counter claims which have come from Sofia and Athens have failed to establish which side was responsible.

The fact remains that hostile forces are facing each other in the Valley of the Struma river, which flows southward across the international boundary, that villages and towns have been bombarded and that blood has been spilled.

Advices from trustworthy sources indicate that the town of Petrich, in Bulgarian territory, has been occupied and that a number of other towns in the Struma valley have at least, been menaced by Greek troops.

A Greek official communication admits the entry of Greek troops into Bulgarian territory, but says the move "was of strategic necessity," to prevent other incursions of Bulgarians on Greek soil.

CAMDEN'S SCHOOLS HIT BY DIPHTHERIA

Two Deaths Result In Wilcox County City This Week

(Associated Press)

SELMA, Ala., Oct. 23—With all schools closed and public hearings of all sorts discontinued, the little town of Camden, Wilcox county, is successfully fighting diphtheria outbreaks, which assumed alarming proportions Sunday, but which today were declared by Camden physicians to be showing signs of improvement.

Two deaths from the disease have resulted.

At present there are only eight positive cases and several suspected cases, all of the patients with the exception of one woman, being children, of from three to 14 years of age.

COPY OF CHARGES AGAINST COLONEL MITCHELL SERVED

Air Official Is Not Yet Technically Arrested Department Says

INSUBORDINATION IS ACCUSATION

San Antonio Statement Basis Of Charges In Specifications

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23—A copy of the court martial charges, brought against Colonel William Mitchell as a result of his criticism of high officers in the air controversy, was served on the Colonel today, but his technical arrest was deferred.

The charges are brought under the article of war which deals with general offenses against the discipline and good order of the army. Technical arrest probably will not take place until just before the officer goes on trial next week, although in the meantime he remains under orders not to leave Washington.

The statement, issued by Colonel Mitchell at San Antonio, after the crash of the Shenandoah, says the formal accusation constituted insubordination and was "highly contemptuous and disrespectful to the war department."

It was in this statement that the Colonel declared the loss of the Shenandoah was due to "criminal and almost treasonable" conduct of the air services.

The specifications also relate to two later statements, which are described as equally objectionable. The charges are brought in the name of Lieutenant Kyle Rucker, chief of the military affairs section of the judge advocate general's office, and were served on Mitchell by Colonel Joseph R. McMullen, assistant judge advocate general.

Representative Reid, of Illinois, counsel for Mitchell, declared the service of the papers carried with it a technical arrest of the Colonel, but war department officials disagreed. They said the technical arrest probably would take place immediately before the officer is placed on trial.

Winkler Warns Public Against Nomads On Highways

ROBBERIES ALSO AT CENTERVILLE

Depredations Occur In Scattered Sections, Reports State

On the heels today of press dispatches regarding the activity of a band of Indians which is said to have committed several robberies in Centerville and other cities of Alabama, G. C. Winkler, one of the builders of the new Church of Christ here, today told an interesting story of having lost some money to a band of Indians or Gypsies, on the Bee Line highway, north of here, while enroute to Nashville last Saturday.

Mr. Winkler's insistent demand for return of his money bluffed the band, he declared, into returning most of the funds, but he believed that in the final check up his loss probably amounted to between $20 and $30.

Mr. Winkler stated that soon after he crossed the river, one of the tires on his car went flat and he got out of the machine to repair it. While he was at work a car approached.

It contained one man and several women and children. This car stopped a short distance from him and three of the women then requested permission to speak to him.

He replied he had no light, and one of the women when requested permission to tell his fortune.

The women gathered around him and he was forced to push them away.

In moment he missed his pocketbook containing in the neighborhood of $100. He promptly accused them of COLONEL MITCHELL will be tried by twelve solemn generals for breach of discipline, which really means for criticizing the stupidly incompetent management of the air forces of the United States.

Will the solemn twelve generals condemn or dismiss Colonel Mitchell for telling the truth, and if they do, what will the president do about it?

ONE FACT may comfort Colonel Mitchell, whatever happens. The people are with him. If some nation well equipped with flying machines should attack this country and bombard a few of our cities, destroying them with ease and dispatch, those twelve generals would not cut much figure.

President Coolidge, moved by public opinion, would end the trial and put Mitchell in charge of aerial defense.

THE twelve warriors presiding at Mitchell's trial, include six Brigadier Generals and six Major Generals. How much do the twelve, put together, know about flying? That's what interests the people of the United States that pay the salaries of the twelve Generals, of Colonel Mitchell and of President Coolidge.

POOL ROOM YIELDS FOUR MEN BIG SUM

EAST, N. J., Oct. 23—Four men early today held up 50 patrons of a pool room, operated by Johnnie Dundee and Phil Krug, well known boxers, and escaped with $4,500 in money.

They overlooked $5,000 hidden behind a radiator. Three men, with drawn pistols, went through the crowd, while the fourth stood guard at the door to prevent the escape of any of the patrons.

THREE INJURED IN AUTOMOBILE CRASH

Wreck Occurs On Bee Line Near Flint Crossing

Three were slightly injured as the result of an automobile crash occurring Thursday night near 10:30 along the Bee Line highway just north of the Flint railway crossing, according to information given here today.

Mrs. John W. Jones suffered cuts about the head, Mrs. R. T. Sheppard a strained back and E. A. Russell, abrasions on the knee. The three were occupying a Chevrolet sedan, returning from a trip to Birmingham, when it is said that a Dodge roadster driven by Jack Thomas, well known Hartelle youth, driving southward, dashed into them. The occupants were brought here by Albany-Decatur people and medical attention given Mrs. Jones.

From accounts of the accident it is said that Russell was driving the Chevrolet car and had crossed the Flint railway when he was caught on the long curve on this side by the Dodge car. It was declared that the car driven by Thomas collided with the sedan near the left front fender, turning it diagonally across the road.

The Dodge car, according to reports, plunged down a twelve foot embankment, turning completely around, facing northward. Mr. Thomas, it seems, was unhurt. The cars were brought to these cities for repairs.

It is not known just how Mrs. Jones received the injuries about the head, it was said that there was no glass broken, other than the headlights. It is believed she was thrown against a sample case in the car.

Huntsville Law Regulates Taxis

(Associated Press)

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., Oct. 23—As a result of the passing by the city council of a measure regulating the activities of taxicabs in the city, Huntsville now has an improved street car system which provides for a 15 minute schedule instead of the former 20 minute program.

To put this schedule into effect, there are now six cars in operation on the lines of the city, two more than were necessary to carry out the 20 minute plan. All of the cars in service are being gone over and placed in first class condition.

The service now offered on the lines is said to be the best ever afforded the city since the cars have been in operation.

Twenty Popular Authors have written, "Bobbed Hair", starting Thursday in the Daily

Connemara sat, absorbed in her own reflections. This statement is to be taken physically as well as mentally, for the reflections she saw were the subject of the reflections she thought.

She could easily see six or seven Connemara's, for her triplicate dressing-table mirror, aided and abetted by a hand glass, gave her various and sundry views of her hair. She studied it in deepest meditation, and critical at that, as who should say, a poor thing, but mine own.

Yet it was not a poor thing. Moderately long, moderately thick, moderately curly its color was—well, Connemara had spent her childish days largely in stamping her foot and shouting back at her teasing schoolmates, "It isn't red, it's orange." Of course, she had more of a proper name than that. She had been christened Constance Mary, but in her earliest attempts at conversation, lingual ineptitude had brought forth only Connemara. Her other name was Moore.

For the rest, she was a slender little thing, light and graceful of movement, possessing more temper than temperament and more wit than wisdom.

These traits, in connection with the color of her hair in certain lights had caused her to be dubbed Cayenne Fairy, and she lived up to the title.

That is the start of "Bobbed Hair," appearing in The Daily beginning next Thursday, a delightful story of youth and romance written by twenty famous authors who know the lives which they weave in fiction. You are going to like this story perhaps better than any story The Daily has offered thus far, it is the best that can be obtained, brimfull of romance and action, appealing to everyone, settling after its own odd way, the question, "To Bob or Not to Bob?" Connemara Moore is a modern girl who does not know the dictates of her own heart, she thinks but she does not decide, finally the decision comes to her and she acts in the same characteristic spontaneous manner.

Begin with the Thursday issue of The Daily, read the story from the beginning to the end, you are going to like it, the whole family will enjoy it. See the modern girl pictured as she really lives. Success Of G. F. P. Proves Catarrh Is Woman's Worst Foe

It Keeps Its Victims Irritable, Depressed, Nervous, Melancholy and Miserable From Pains and Irregularity.

The sensational disclosure that nearly 90 per cent of women who suffer from painful and irregular functioning of their generative organs are victims of the most dreaded of maladies—catarrh, has caused such a tremendous amount of talk among women here, that it is almost certain that the success of G. F. P. which is gaining such popular favor wherever it is being introduced to overcome this condition will be as great here as it is in other cities.

Thousands of the best known women in all walks of life are making public statements in the papers all over the country showing that their enthusiasm for G. F. P. is really greater than that of the discoverers themselves about this remarkable medicine.

"To explain this," says a representative of the laboratories, "I want to first say that St. Joseph's G. F. P. is believed to be the first direct specific for catarrhal inflammation of the mucus linings of the delicate generative organs, and the terribly distressing ailments which come from this dreaded malady.

"Show me a woman who is irritable, nervous, depressed, and thin, sallow and weak, suffering from headaches, pains every month and often-times nausea, and I will show you one who is suffering from catarrh of the generative organs.

"But it has remained for the perfection of St. Joseph's G. F. P. to provide a really direct treatment for it. This is proven by the thousands of women who have been quickly relieved by using G. F. P. and is the reason this medicine is becoming more popular with girls and women as fast as they learn that they can regain their health, strength and robust vitality by using it."

SYNOPSIS

Diane Bledsoe has confessed to Mrs. John Manning that she was driving the car when it killed a woman, the crime of which young Bob Manning is accused. Mrs. Manning and Diane are now caught in a forest fire, while Manning and Diane's father, terrified, are speeding toward them in an automobile. Young Bob, meanwhile, charged with manslaughter, is in jail awaiting trial.

Then, with an appalling shriek, Diane, her clothes in flames, dashed blindly on, a mad thing, a wild thing.

Amidst the roar and crackling of smoldering fire, Eileen struggled after her, to see the girl with another shriek plunge downwards in the smoke and disappear beneath the muddy surface of the river below. And to find herself poised, wavering upon its very brink, with death, by fire behind her, by water before her.

CHAPTER XV

On through the night as swiftly as the big car would carry them, came the two men. With set faces, they leaned far forward to stare at the ruddy glow in the sky while the machine swerved around curves at a perilous speed. They sat, shaken by ever increasing apprehension, while that glow grew brighter and brighter. They shouted incoherent questions at the fugitives in automobiles, whom they first met, yet, they never slowed their swift flight for

Wavering upon its very brink, with death, by fire behind her, an answer. They scanned those they met in horse drawn vehicles and never paused. Soon they were among a weary crowd of stragglers on foot, but they did not stop. Out of the night, out of that fiery furnace ahead, seemed to have come a call which they must answer.

Now, like a weary firefly, a spent spark settled upon the bonnet of the car and the air was so laden with smoke that they began to cough.

"Go on," cried John Manning, closing the window of the car on his side.

"Keep on," echoed Bledsoe, as he did the same.

Grim-faced, the chauffeur pulled the windshield shut and settled himself anew at the wheel to plunge on into that fog, yellow under the headlights, which all but obscured the road.

More sparks fell, ever larger. They passed a place where the leaves were on fire at the side of the road. Now a flaming fagot swished down upon them, then another and another. The world seemed filled with a golden mist and everything was growing lighter and lighter. A mighty crackling sounded, muffled by the closed doors and windows of the car. Now they were running along, with the river on one side of them, on the other a forest afire. There was a smell of blistered paint. A flaming torch seemed to leap out of the fog ahead and measure its length along their way. With a crazy swerve, the car avoided it, righted itself and sped on. Then, suddenly, a curtain of fire barred their way, and with a quick motion the chauffeur put on the emergency brake so hard that it lifted John and Bledsoe from their seats.

"Blocked," he said simply.

"Blocked," groaned Bledsoe, burying his face in his hands. "Diane—my baby girl—there."

Ghastly in its emotion, John Manning's face suddenly set with resolution, but he uttered no word. Eileen . . . there. Well, he had sent her there . . . failed to appreciate her when he had her . . . failed to trust her when put to the test. Very well . . . where she was . . . he would go. Perhaps, she would know, . . . understand?

He opened the door and climbed out. He shrank before the awful blast of heat which beat down upon him. Choking and gasping, but protected in the open space on the river side of the car, he did not pause. Straightening himself, he turned as if to walk right into the flames.

What was that? A woman's shriek amidst that inferno? John Manning stopped and peered ahead. It was as if he looked down a corridor, walled on the one hand by leaping flames, on the other by water. There, far away, very far away under those conditions, he saw a girl. A girl, her clothes blazing. He saw her burst like a crazed thing out of the fire. He watched her plunge down, down into the depths of the water below.

John gasped. Then, even as he gazed, there followed a woman. Out of the flames, from the very midst of that blinding incandescence, she came. Groping, staggering, reeling dizzily, she came forth to pause, wavering; one instant about to fall back into the fire from which she had emerged, the next, to plunge forward into the river.

And John knew her. Even at that distance and among those hellish surroundings, he could not mistake that form, that figure. "Eileen," he cried, but he might as well have saved his breath for his voice was lost before the awful roar of the flames.

"Diane," choked Bledsoe, stumbling breathlessly up to John's side. "She's in the river!"

They started forward, gasping, suffocated, stifled by the smoke. And the heat seemed to wither the very flesh on their bones. John was ahead, while Bledsoe followed more heavily.

As they ran towards her, Eileen seemed to recover herself. They saw her pick her way down the sharp declivity of the bank. They saw her lean far out and down. Then, they saw her tugging, dragging, pulling with an energy far beyond her strength, at some object in the water.

"She's helping Diane," breathed Bledsoe.

It was true. Even as they watched, they could see her struggling to draw the half fainting girl from the water to a place of safety.

From far up the river came a low moaning sound, a dull roar. John looked and what he saw almost froze the blood in his veins. It was as if that landslide had finally aroused the slow anger of the river. Those trickling rivulets about the dam had done their work. Weakened, strained to its utmost by the capacity load behind it, the ancient structure had given and broken. Now, the unleashed flood was rushing down the river, a sheer wall of angry, seething water, spreading from shore to shore.

In ignorance of this, Eileen had struggled on and finally managed to help Diane into a position of safety well above her, but only to sink back herself on her precarious foothold completely exhausted; to cling there, as John saw, right in the path of the oncoming waves; to await, in her helplessness, those advancing waters which must inevitably engulf her and drag her away to destruction.

With a hoarse exclamation of terror, John rushed on, his heart pounding like a trip hammer, gasping, suffocating in that awful atmosphere, in a mad race with that oncoming body of water.

Eileen too, had seen her danger. Now, she struggled upward only to sink back helplessly.

Nearer, ever nearer, came the water.

John, cursing the slowness of his movements, groaned aloud in his anguish. Was he to reach her, to find his Eileen once more, only to have her die before his eyes?

Unutterably weary, he fought on, every step became a pain, every movement agony, leaving Bledsoe behind.

Nearer, ah, how very near was that mighty wave.

COUNTY COURT HAS VERY ACTIVE WEEKNumbers Of Cases Are Heard For Both The State and Cities

The Morgan county court adjourned late Thursday afternoon after having one of the busiest weeks in the history of its sessions, Judge William T. Lawe presided throughout the proceedings which were started Monday with the criminal docket being the first to come before the court.

Considerable interest had been shown earlier in the week from the surrounding county, people coming here from all over the district to hear the proceedings. During the last two days the crowds at the courthouse were gathered chiefly from these cities when the appealed cases from the municipal courts were heard. The court was unable to reach a great number of the cases and other dates will be set for the hearing.

12 Years Ago From The Daily of TODAY October 23, 1913

Miss Mary Claire Carter has gone to Leesdale, Ala., to take charge of a school.

The marriage of Miss Eva Siveley and Mr. C. P.
Johnston will be solemnized this evening at the 9th street Methodist church.

Mrs. W. P. Reeves, of Tuscaloosa, is in the cities among friends.

Mrs. J. H. Calvin will entertain the Embroidery
Circle this afternoon at three.

Dr. Olin West has joined Mrs. West here. They are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Harris.

The fall season of the year for Albany-Decatur is pretty much the same, as it always has been—prosperous and optimistic.

If Secretary Mellon had less money, who knows, perhaps the people of small means might benefit materially from his tax reduction plans.

Building of the Moulton to Decatur highway means a great deal to the people of this district, we hope the highway commission will not stand for any delay in starting the work.

Down in Birmingham newspaper readers still are adressing sarcastic letters, through the papers, to each other about differences of opinion on evolution. Well, perhaps, they really have nothing else to do.

Thinking before you move may lead you along the wrong course, but you will not get there ahead of the other fellow who has jumped at a conclusion before attempting to reason the many whys and wherefores which enter into everyday life and happiness.

Albany-Decatur Kiwanians are ready to go to Selma where the state convention is to be held the first part of next week. Were it not for these men, it is doubtful if Selma and the rest of the state would realize what a live wire proposition there is up here, unless these fellows went down there with their soul in the work of upbuilding this better part of Alabama.

It is strange how little interest the American people evince in the dispatches from Asiatic countries. News of a revolt in China, riot in Japan, British movements in India, all are lacking in interest to the American people.
"American warships are ordered to Syrian ports" that puts a very different light on the subject. Americans are willing to let alone just so long as they are in turn unmolested.

THANK YOU, MR. AYERS, WE FIND OUR FAITH WELL FOUNDED

Once in a while a newspaper writer is handed a compliment, and today we are reproducing one of these rareties paid us by the Anniston Star. Harry Ayers, publisher of the Star, one of the modern Alabama dailies, picked a paragraph from the editorial column of this newspaper and added considerable thought and effort into making it an interesting article. Here is what the Star has to say:

Faith in the home town is the greatest asset a people can contribute to a community, and a newspaper that shows its faith in its town and declares that faith to the world is a wonderful power for the upbuilding of a community.

Proof that this is true is shown in a number of Alabama cities, and one of the most striking instances is found in the twin cities of Albany-Decatur, where The "Albany-Decatur Daily" has been persistently and consistently proclaiming the advantages of that community to the world. The Twin Cities now are showing the effect of this boasting, as evidenced in the following from the "Albany-Decatur Daily":

Everywhere citizens are talking of better business conditions. The period of activity has arrived, outside interests are looking into this much talked-of situation and investing in the lands that harbor so many great riches.
It is a source of much satisfaction to the people of these cities to notice that outside capital is interested here. It seems that all that we have talked of through the years in the past is now about to come true. We have preached of the wealth here and we have not been far wrong.

Unless a people have faith in their town the outsider will not think it worth while to invest in the town. Those cities that have shown the greatest and most substantial growth are the cities that have been boosted most by their home people and advertised most by their home papers and home businesses and civic organizations.

Where home town people are enthusiastic over their town and can see its advantages and can proclaim them to the world, there always is a progressive, growing town to show the result of such faith and work. Every town has something its people can boast about, and the boasting helps.

This comment is very kind from the Star. Sometime when a newspaper editor fights along day after day, looking ever into the future of things, seeing the very best there is to be seen in the present day of things and then walks into the street to hear some citizen panning the city for which he is working so earnestly, he becomes just a bit discouraged; this however, is only for the time in which he is exposed to the cries of his fellow-townersmen and the next day he comes stronger than ever. His sort of optimism is the sort which cannot be downed, if he has a town to build. There was never a city, no matter how large, which could not stand constructive criticism.

Again do we thank Mr. Ayers for his generous compliment;
we feel that our faith in our cities is being justified as the days roll on. The future is more brighter than ever before; each day brings the story of new enterprise and building. We have been greatly encouraged during the past year and we look forward to continuing a progressive work during the next.

YES, YOU MAY LAUGH, IF YOU CAN LAUGH
AT THE ATHENS-DECATUR ROAD

Up Athens way newspaper people have asked permission for a hearty laugh at the inconsistent position taken by The Daily on the subject of good roads in this section of this glorious Valley can find a way to laugh, they are o this glorious Valley can find a way to laugh, they are certainly welcome to all the hearty chuckles they are able to muster. The fact is though, that the matter is not for laughing, it is very serious with us and we believe that it is likewise the subject for considerable concentration of thought on the part of our Limestone friends.

The Limestone Democrat calls attention to a series of editorials appearing in The Daily from time to time during the past spring and summer in which The Daily stated that Limestone had nothing to kick about in the road system that has been given that county by the state highway commission. The Daily did no mean the article in that light, The Daily was backing the state highway commission as a body of men who were trying to remove a part of the road difficulties in the state of Alabama.
That, we believe, the commission had been trying to do, and is still making an effort to clear up the more difficult roads in the state that interstate commerce might not be halted. The Daily did not say that well paved permanent roadways existed in Limestone county. The writer had been over most of the main trunk line roadways of the county and would have had no cause to make such assertion.

Our position in the matter of good road building has been in the effort to aid a struggling highway department which has met obstacle after obstacle and has succeeded in surmounting a great many of them, but which nevertheless is in need of the support of the newspapers and the people of the state. We are aware that Limestone county does not possess permanently paved roadways any more than does Morgan county, but we are also quite aware that Athens has a complete roadway leading from the Limestone capital to the Muscle Shoals district. This, have we been denied, and it is not to be forgotten that Albany-Decatur is much greater in importance so far as commerce and industry is concerned.
Albany-Decatur is likewise the center for people coming from the south who are desirous of going into the Shoals district. So then, we do not believe that Limestone county has been slighted in the road building program, though a great many of her trunk lines are badly in need of improvement at the present time.

Limestone is extremely fortunate in having the Ardmore roadway to the Tennessee line repaired. Athens has a roadway straight into the heart of the Shoals district which is one of the best highways in this section of the state, where Athens is lacking at the present time in an adequate road facility to Huntsville and a safe highway, which may be traversed the year round, to Albany-Decatur.

This latter is interesting to The Daily and Twin City folks right now. Literally hundreds of automobiles pass over this roadway daily, or rather slide over in an attempt to get to Albany-Decatur from the northern districts of the state or in traveling northward. Approximately five miles of this roadway is passable, easy and safe to ride upon. The remaining six to seven miles requires great effort and patience on the part of the traveler.

Limestone county needs the roads, so does Morgan county, The Daily is not inconsistent in telling Athenians to quit grumbling about what they have and ask for something better. Limestone has one good highway, a second is being repaired at this time, a third will be in good condition shortly if the Limestone papers will get into step with The Daily in advocating that the Decatur-Athens highway be repaired at once.

Alabama is not far enough advanced to reach the permanent paved highway stage, so there is little reason in growing over dirt roads so long as we already have them, regardless of what our views may be on the item of excessive expenditures in upkeep.

We do not feel that we will be without the support of our Limestone county contemporaries for the Democrat has added to the article recently written

"Since writing the above, we have ridden over the Decatur pike from Athens to the overhead bridge and the condition of the road as a part of the great national highway is a disgrace to the county and the state commission."

It is too bad that the writer did not come a bit further along the road, the last three miles to the Tennessee river would inspire the most ardent admirer of the highway commission to write an ode, antagonizing in import to the heads at Montgomery which are busily seeking to find a lantern to lead Alabama out of the mud. What they need is an electric torch, not a lantern. The coming road bond issue will provide such a strong powered light.
It is up to the people to vote the money if they wish to gain the roads.

Limestone and Morgan counties see the need for roads, there is nothing to do but cast a vote for the bond issue just so soon as the legislators see fit to bring it to the attention of the people, then the Limestone Democrat and the Albany-Decatur Daily will cease to engage in controversy over a minor point which will be greatly appreciated, no doubt, by the readers of the two publications.

What we desire is the road, not the editorial controversy.
Yes, you may laugh at a seeming inconsistency, but we intend to fight the road battle until Morgan and Limestone counties are no longer hindered at any time of the year with a sloppy, muddy road. Get into the fight and enjoy a smile of triumph when the fight is finally won, this is no time for "I told you so."

WELL, it's a rich country. Europe has decided to keep the peace for a while. OUR billions will come back from Europe gradually.

SECRETARY MELLON is planning income tax cuts, for the big man and the little man, including increases in the allowance for children and other dependents. The average man's income, as Mr. Z. C. Simmons points out, is doubled. The wealth of the United States has hardly been touched.

THE iron wall keeps out immigration and makes United States citizenship worth in dignity all that the ancient Roman citizenship was worth, and a great deal more in hard cash. We are a fortunate people. Let's hope we shall have brains enough to get in condition, ready to protect from outside attack all that we have.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE tells the council of Congregational Churches that in the crime wave following the war we must rely upon religion as the only remedy. The President knows of "No source of moral power other than that which comes from religion."

He expects the clergy in charge of religion to display unusual vigor and efficiency.

DETAILED suggestion for curing crime with religion would be interesting. Prayer might check the hijacker, bootlegger, burglar, hold-up man, if he could be made to realize that twenty-five or thirty million were praying against him.

It is not decrying the powers of religion, however, to suggest that an efficient police force, refusing its share of the bootleg money, and courts of justice, operating speedily and surely, would help religion to curb crime.

HARD-HEADED bankers don't like to lend on churches or theatres. They know nothing about theatres, don't consider them "A business." As for churches, they feel that nobody in particular is responsible and, anyhow, they wouldn't like to foreclose a mortgage on a church. It might bring "bad luck."

THIS does not apply to a church organization well managed. The Chase National Bank, of New York, has arranged to lend $1,500,000 to the Vatican, to buy a site for the new American Catholic College in Rome. The money is lent below 5 per cent, and there won't be any trouble about collecting principal or interest.

IT'S a long way from the old Genee bankers that used to finance the Pope's enterprises, such as the building of the magnificent St. Peter's, to the Chase National Bank in lower Broadway, in New York City. The empire of Finance has come a long way west.

"TOKIO sees danger of war with Russia." That's the heading. Russians are too wise, and so probably are the Japanese, to start a real war just now. But if war between white Europe and Yellow Asia must come, the Russians might as well undertake it. Revolution arouses enthusiasm, and men for some reason fight well for a new government.

Russia might be glad to prove to Japan that she can't do to Bolshevik Russia what she did so easily to the Russia of Czars and drunken or dishonest Grand Dukes.

EUROPE, with a face nicely washed, hair brushed, like a little boy appearing at a Sunday school picnic, is coming for more loans, saying, "I am not going to fight any more. Lend me."

There is plenty here to be borrowed. The National City Bank of New York shows deposits exceeding $800,000,000. The Chase National Bank nearby has more than $450,000,000.

AND as for money in the country, there is a good deal of it. High finance would like to raise the interest rate for stock exchange loans and check what they call dangerous speculation in Wall Street. But if they raise the rate, Wall Street would simply be flooded with money from outside banks. It is what the French call "Un Embaras de Richesse."

WOMAN EXECUTIVE REBELS AGAINST HOLDING A JOB

The first important woman executive to revolt publicly against "the fetish of the job" and to decide that her place is in the home, gives her reason for backsiding in the November Harper's. She writes anonymously but the magazine states that she has been the editor of a magazine and has been prominently connected with a national welfare organization.

"A few months ago I threw off the burden of a lie with which I have struggled for fifteen years, a lie which kept me spiritually a coward, although outwardly I am a glossy successful business woman. That lie is the myth of the job."

"It does not take courage, independence, daring, initiative to hold a job. It takes tact, obedience, subterfuge, subtlety, shrewdness, hypocrisy, intrigue—even servility. I have had my lessons in job holding and is being a boss. By chance I once read a note returned to my office for want of a clear address. It was written by a member of my staff, and from it I learned that I had the reputation of being a martinet and a gruff and brutal tyrant. I have come to realize a great part of that must have been true—it is still true when at times I put myself in the perilous position of directing others. Having been executive at an early age, I was necessarily always in the right."

"What is the use of taking such a way of life too seriously? Here I am thirty-seven years old, and as soon as I have given up my job, my social importance drops from me. Here I am wanting to know how to embroider and how to dance the Charleston and how to be a charming home woman, and the fact that I have had the biggest job won't help me. Women have sighed with envy when talking to me. Women with jobs may be more interesting than women who are just lilies of the field, but that is because in any situation in life they would be alert and eager-minded. If you work as long as I have done, you get to the place where it holds no false thrills for you. I like to change places with my housekeeper. I like my children to be with me all day, instead of with her. I like to be the one to take walks with them to read to them; I like to cook and to eat and to be restful and leisurely. Why are we rushing girls into jobs eaching every one of them a job or a trade, no matter how much money they have. Is it because we have lost the art of leisure? Is it because the bee is so fast that it has withered the amateur's attitude out of the women too? Are women to forget how to spend their lives valuing things that have no money tag? Enjoyment of life is the end of life, not enjoyment of a job."

"Even in the Christian philosophy the Marys, the life-givers, the charming, delightful women, were given precedence over the workers, and if you hold jobs long enough you're apt to become a pretty dull girl indeed, knowing one thing only, with few accomplishments, with few delightful ways of just being alive; taking things too seriously, budgeting out all the things which can't be systematized and analyzed and accounted for. We women mustn't take jobs so seriously."

"We have not to admit that it is really more important to live out life with the dignity, the acceptance, and the fullness of animals than it is to hold the best job in the world. We have got to admit in our creed of success that it is more important to

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Broke six months ago, Osborne Cutler Wood, son of and former aide of Major General Leonard Wood, said that he had made $100,000 in Tampa real estate.

In New York to buy some clothes, he insists that the $100,000 is the first installment he is going to get back of nearly $1,000,000 which he made in Wall street speculation and lost at the gaming tables. He is going into Palm Beach realty soon.

On arrival in Florida from Cadiz on a tramp steamer six months ago, he had a few hundred dollars of his Wall street money left and spent most of that while looking around for a job. He got a job as real estate salesman at $50 a week, with D. P. Davis, who was selling hot dogs, on a street corner a few years ago.

Discussing his gaming losses, he said: "This time my money is not going to be lost in that manner."

He intimated he would not defend divorce proceedings started by his wife at Wilmington, Del.

The True Cost of Printing

Do you consider printing as merely an expense necessary to the operation of your business? Or do you treat it as a means of building business?

Poor printing is an expense, not only in the money it costs, but in its undesirable reflection on your business.

Good printing costs nothing—it offsets its own cost and makes money for you.

Whether the printing be a direct appeal for business such as a circular or other form of direct advertising, or a statement or other office form, quality counts in the reckoning of its cost.

We look upon printing as something which should absorb its own cost and make a profit for its user. And we produce printing that does.

OSBORNE WOOD IS RICH ONCE MORE

Makes Fortune While a Realty Salesman
In Florida

Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Broke six months ago, Osborne Cutler Wood, son of and former aide of Major General Leonard Wood, said that he had made $100,000 in Tampa real estate.

In New York to buy some clothes, he insists that the $100,000 is the first installment he is going to get back of nearly $1,000,000 which he made in Wall street speculation and lost at the gaming tables. He is going into Palm Beach realty soon.

On arrival in Florida from Cadiz on a tramp steamer six months ago, he had a few hundred dollars of his Wall street money left and spent most of that while looking around for a job. He got a job as real estate salesman at $50 a week, with D. P. Davis, who was selling hot dogs, on a street corner a few years ago.

Discussing his gaming losses, he said: "This time my money is not going to be lost in that manner."

He intimated he would not defend divorce proceedings started by his wife at Wilmington, Del.

be a lovely, brave and beautiful human being than it is to hold the biggest job or to make the most money in all the world. I cannot do that and hold a job, so I have had to give up the job."

A Shopping Convenience That Costs You Nothing

The cost of maintaining grocery delivery service is offset by other economies effected in the Phone-for-Food grocery stores. Elimination of much of the time consumed by clerks with store-to-store shoppers is one economy and others will readily present themselves to the thoughtful housewife.

Thus Albany-Decatur's Phone-for-Food Grocers are enabled to save you the trouble of marketing in person and lugging home your purchases, at no cost to you. The cost of their prompt, convenient delivery service absorbs itself.

Shop the Phone-for-Food way. You may as well—it won't increase your grocery bill.

ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Morgan County W. M. U. held with the Central Baptist church on last Tuesday was thought by many to be the best meeting of its kind they had ever attended. The attendance was large, with most of the societies of the association represented, and a spirit of enthusiasm prevailed throughout the day.

A large number of visitors were present to hear the address of Jacob Garenhaus, who spoke interestingly of his work among the Jews. Mrs. J. N. Moore of Huntville was the principal speaker of the afternoon. Special music, solo by Mrs. W. C. Bailey, and duet by Mrs. P. H. Sandlin and Mrs. Ernest Brannum, was a pleasing feature of the program. Mrs. Hanson, the presiding officer, re-elected to serve another year, made a strong appeal to the women for cooperation and greater efforts during the coming year. Special mention was made of the Danville society for their work in Mission Study and increased number of subscriptions to the missionary magazines. This society also had the largest percentage of their membership present at the annual meeting and, as an award, carried the lovely, W. M. U. attendance banner.

Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: superintendent, Mrs. A. T. Hanson; secretary treasurer, Mrs. W. C. Bailey; Young People's leader, Miss Madeline Dix.

THURSDAY CLUB

Mrs. H. E. Dryden, Jr., entertained the Thursday Club this week at the home of her mother, Mrs. J. R. Daniel. Exquisite roses in silver containers were placed in the living room where bridge was enjoyed.

Lovely refreshments were enjoyed after the game.

South Dakota Will Start Political Pot

(Associated Press)
PIERRE, S. D., Oct. 23.—The opening salute of the 1926 national campaign will be fired here December 1 when the political parties of South Dakota assemble to designate their candidates for the United States Senate, congress and state offices.

Few outstanding issues are noted between the republicans, democrats and farmer-laborites, but the republican party itself—which for years has dominated state politics—is divided into factions on participation by the state in private industry.

The progressive wing of the republican party was responsible for the rural credit act, the state cement plant, the state coal mine and state participation in the retailing of gasoline. There is little doubt but that Senator Peter Norbeck and Governor Carl Junderson, both of whom will seek reelection, will support the state's past record in these activities.

Another wing of the republican party in which Sam H. Eildred, former governor, stands out as a leader, expressed itself as irrevocably against participation by the state in the field of private enterprise.

This faction resolved it would seek to nominate candidates "who will be true to republican principles and who will give support to a republican presdent."

On November 10 the people will gather in the precincts to choose their county delegates. These delegates will attend county meetings November 1 when three proposalmen will be selected. Then on December 1 county proposalmen—195 in all at each party—meet in Pierre.

The vote of the three county proposalmen depends on the number of votes cast for the party's candidate or governor in the last general election.

The party meeting then select their candidates. If five or more proposalmen disagree they may hold a meeting of their own and name a "minor ticket." The tickets and platforms submitted to the counties for ratification on December 22 and individual candidates may file on platforms different from either the majority or minority stands, until Jan. 1, 1926.

The primary election is held March 12, 1926, at which each voter must designate his party affiliation and is given a ballot which contains only the names of the majority, minority and individual candidates in that party.

Helpful Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I have been going with a young man for several months. Some time ago he kissed me. He seemed very sorry afterward and promised not to do it again unless I gave him permission.

The other evening he kissed me again. I like him very much and would not like to discontinue our friendship, but I want to do what is right. Please give me your advice.

IN DOUBT: Perhaps there was something you did which encouraged the young man, my dear. If there was not, he owes you an apology. If it is forthcoming, make him promise to respect your views in this direction—and hold to them rigidly. In all probability he will not repeat the "offense" if he wants to continue your friendship.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am a girl in my teens. I like a young man about my age, but he won't pay any attention to me. How can I attract him?

BROWN EYES: If you feel that you have tastes and interests in common with this young man, then your friendship with him is almost certain. I suggest that you invite him to call on you one evening. Spend the evening discussing the things which interest both of you and wait for "developments."

HOW YOU CAN DETECT
BABY'S COLIC CRY

An Infant's Stomach Discomfort Is Announced by Paroxysmal Outbursts of Crying Which Continues as Long as There's Pain.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

DURING the past two or three weeks I have been talking to the young mother about the significance of crying on the part of the baby. The baby does not talk in a language understood by the uninitiated, but it gives utterance to sounds which the loving mother interprets as accurately as she does the printed word.

Much can be learned from the cry of a baby. Its vigor or health or its weakness of body may be determined by its cry. Certain diseases or abnormal conditions may be determined by this sign.

If you ever ate something you should have avoided, you know what it is to have the colic. You recall the cutting, knife-like, stabbing, sticking, gripping pains of colic. For periods of time you are in perfect comfort, except for the dread of the recurring paroxysms of pain which double you up in agony.

Babies are liable to attacks of indigestion, feeding, food which is too rich or abdominal discomfort. Perhaps gas forms from the fermentation in the intestine. Colic pains result.

The crying from colic is not like the crying from earache. The latter is a constant, uninterrupted pain, and the consequence of the crying does not seem to be that it won't stop till the earache stops.

The crying due to the colic is paroxysmal. When the gripping pains comes the child screams in agony. The cry stops as soon as the pain passes. An intermittent cry of this description, then, is a pretty sure sign of colic.

An under-nourished, weak and feeble baby is very apt to cry a good deal. This cry is not like the powerful and penetrating yell of earache or colic. On the contrary, it is a whining, peevish, weeping little cry. The apparent illness or under-development of the child explains it.

The brain of the infant is as delicate as its body and just as liable to trouble. Disturbance of this organ is indicated by single shrill screams. One terrific yell escapes the child. There is perfect quiet for a long time, when another yell pierces the atmosphere.

Sometimes the child awakens suddenly at night and lets out a terrific yell of this sort. Or the baby may awaken to go at once into a prolonged spasm of screaming. Night terrors, bad dreams, are the cause of this symptom. In turn, they are probably due to wrong feeding.

If the mouth or throat is sore, the baby cries on trying to nurse or whenever anything is put into the mouth. Chewing or swallowing hurts.

You see, much can be learned from a baby's cry.

Albany High Hangs Up Tie With Athens Aggies As Spencer Hits Line For 6 Points

Albany high and the Athens Aggies played to a 6-6 tie Thursday afternoon at Athens in a hard fought game packed with thrills and feature runs by Bishop and Perie. Coach Alford of Albany high said today that his team played a hard game, gaining ground in successful aerial attempts and smashing the Aggie line for repeated gains.

Neither team was able to make much headway in the first quarter and the quarter ended in a scoreless tie. In the second quarter the local high team drove across the line on straight football with Spencer carrying the ball. The drive started on the Aggie 35 yard line. Try for goal after touchdown failed. The half ended Albany 6 Aggies 0.

Athens came back in the end of the third quarter and put across a touchdown after Perie had knocked a pass into the hands of an Athens receiver who raced 35 yards across the last white marker. Try for point was missed and the game was deadlocked at 6 all.

The teams battled for a break in the last quarter which never came and the game ended at six all.

Starring for the local club were Spencer, Bishop and Perie on the offensive, while Drake was a factor in running interference. Spencer dived through the Aggie line time after time, Bishop featured the afternoon with a 35 yard sprint down the field. Perie took an Aggie punt and zigzagged his way 40 yards before being hauled down. Only one substitution was made, Johnson for Pappenburg at end. Zantz and Mitchell stood out in defensive line tactics.

Local Man Tells Of Loss Of Money To Band On Road

having slipped his wallet from his pocket. He declared he later saw the pocketbook fall to the ground and believed it fell from the clutches of one of the women.

His insistent demands for his money was followed by the discovery on the ground of some $10 or $15 in bills. The women denied strenuously that they had the money.

Mr. Winkler, using good presence of mind, got into his car and drove down the road a short distance, then turned his car across the thoroughfare partially blocking it.

The other car waited, sometime, then followed, Mr. Winkler said. Realizing that the car could get by, he stepped in front of it, and was almost run over, but succeeded in stopping the machine. He renewed his demands for return of the money, threatening the party with arrest.

Finally, he said one of the party suggested that the money might have been dropped in the car. On the running board and on the floor of the front seat, he found small amounts of the money, he said, but realized that he had recovered far from all of the total.

The man, Mr. Winkler declared, ultimately agreed to give Mr. Winkler $20 in settlement. Mr. Winkler said he took the $20 but refused to agree to a settlement, but it was all that he could get being unarmed and faced by overwhelming numbers.

Upon reaching Athens, he obtained officers and searched a camp of nomads near there, but failed to find the party he was looking for.

Reports have been numerous of various depredations committed by roving bands of wanderers in several sections of Alabama and Tennessee and Mr. Winkler related his experience simply as a matter of warning to other people who might have to be on the highways in cars.

He believed the plan in his case was to get all of the money they could from him, and keep whatever amount they could, without actually committing violence.

The stories of the occurrences in South Alabama, as told in the Age-Herald this morning, follow:

CENTERVILLE, Ala., Oct. 23.—While officers were busily engaged in their duties in connection with the Bibb Banking and Trust company, five Indian women entered the vault and stole $1,000, according to information given out by the president of the bank John T. Kennedy late this afternoon.

The loss was not discovered until 4 o'clock this afternoon when the accounts for the day were balanced, when it was found that $1,000 was gone and the officials of the bank then remembered that the women had been behind the bank railings and had also been in the vault.

Going from the Bibb County Banking and Trust company to the Peoples bank, the women attempted to enter the vault there, but were ordered away. Soon after the robbery is believed to have taken place, eight cars containing Indian men and women left Centerville, announcing that they were going to Montgomery.

According to reports reaching here, however, they did not go to Montgomery, but first stopped at Randolph, 15 miles from Centerville, where they robbed a store. Leaving Randolph, they went to Maplesville, where they robbed the bank of Maplesville, of several dollars, but the exact loss has not been learned.

Upon leaving Maplesville, the party proceeded to West Blocton, where it is stated that two stores were robbed of several hundred dollars worth of merchandise. No other robberies had been reported tonight and it is not known whether other towns were visited or not.

Immediately after the officers discovered that Bibb Banking and Trust company had been robbed, they got in touch with all surrounding towns and news was received here tonight that the occupants of five of the eight cars had been arrested in Selma and they are being held in the Dallas county jail pending instructions from this place.

Not since the World War has so much excitement been created in Centerville as has existed since it was learned this afternoon that the Bibb Banking and Trust company had been robbed and that the robbers had made their escape for the time being.

The cars in which the Indians travel are all high powered, capable of travelling at a high rate of speed, according to those who have seen them. The cars are also practically new and all are fairly well filled with people and their belongings.

The Indians have been camping around Centerville for several days and the women claimed to be fortune tellers and plied their trade when possible, while the men engaged in various avocations.

During the time the women were in the Bibb County Banking and Trust company today, the men were attracting a crowd around them in the streets and it is the consensus of opinion that they do this to give the women a chance to rob the bank.

IF your feet were permitted to choose the shoes they have to wear, they would express their positive preference for Osteo-path-iks—because these shoes are comfortable all over, right at the start.

Extra roominess for the toes; a firm snug arch that prevents slipping forward; and a narrow glove-fitting heel that won't let the foot slide up and down—this construction, plus absence of tacks in heels—is why Osteo-path-iks make walking thoroughly enjoyable.
